

From way up high, while ambling in the sky,
a girl munching mielies catches their eye.

'Hello dear friend!
What a joy to see you.
We've come for that
visit long overdue.'

Nomsa is buoyant,
offers them some food.
They lick their lips,
it tastes so good.

'How do we say thank you
and express our gratitude?'

'In isiXhosa we say
enkosi,' cries Nomsa.

'Onwards?' they ask her and Nomsa squeals, 'Let's go!'
There are many more ways to say thank you to know.
